Nation Grets New Year In Quiet, Relaxed Mood

TEL AVIV, Sunday. — Permanent and temporary synagogues were packed here for the New Year services, with many persons standing outside the buildings to hear the Shofar. The streets were overflown with holiday crowds strolling in search of a cool spot, or on their way to the beach, which was crowded with bathers.

Despite the "no bathing" regulations, traffic yesterday was somewhat lighter than on a normal Saturday, but the roads were full of cars and taxis today. Beaches at Ramat Hashikma and Herzlia also drew large crowds on both days.

All soldiers who could be spared from duties received leave for those who remained in camp special services were arranged.

The distribution in Tel Aviv was good. Ice was sold on Saturday night and again on Sunday morning from carts all around the town. Customers handed over tickets bought in advance.

Even-of-holiday shopping was slower than usual, reportedly because of the general shortage of money now being experienced. The large clothing stores and souvenir shops were practically empty, with sales personnel trying to attract trade by being especially polite.

The shortage of money was marked in the small number of persons travelling from town to town this year. No particular pressure was reported from the Central Bus Station on Friday and again tonight, although the large clothing stores and souvenir shops were practically empty, with sales personnel trying to attract trade by being especially polite.

Jerusalem Municipal Council Meets Tonight

A meeting of the Jerusalem Municipal Council will be held tonight in a new effort to elect a mayor.

It still appeared that there was no agreement among the various political parties on a candidate who could muster a majority. The left-wing opposition groups are expected to nominate Dr. Walter Abelson, Progressive Councilor. The coalition may nominate Acting Mayor E. Eliezer. Neither is expected to get a majority.

It was learned that the District Representative, Dr. A. Biran, met with various party leaders in an effort to reach a compromise, but it was reported that the meeting was not successful.

Clashes in Vienna Over Rommel Film

VIENNA, Sunday (Reuter). — Police clashed here on Friday night with stone-throwing Communist youths who demonstrated against the American film "Rommel, the Desert Fox." Reports said 30 police and 50 Communists were injured and 30 demonstrators arrested in the 45-minute battle.

The Communists, mostly young men brought here on leave from Soviet-controlled factories outside the town, hurled paving stones at the police and later raised road blocks on tramlines. All traffic was halted.

Sweden Votes For New Parliament

STOCKHOLM, Sunday (Reuter). — Polling in the Swedish Parliamentary elections started quietly today.

Of the 230 seats in the lower house, the Social Democrats have 112. Since October, 1949, they have governed in a coalition with the Agrarian Party.

A gain of only three seats today would, with the Speaker's casting vote, give the Social Democrats a majority. It is not expected that their coalition with the Agrarians would be broken up by this, however.

U.S. May Bar Chaplin from Returning

WASHINGTON, Sunday (Reuter). — The U.S. Attorney General, Mr. James P. McGrath, has ordered an enquiry to determine whether Charlie Chaplin should be re-admitted to the United States.

Chaplin, a British subject, sailed with his wife and four children from New York on the Queen Elizabeth on September 17 to attend the English premiere of his film "Limelight." This is his first trip outside the U.S. in 20 years.

In a radio message to Reuter from aboard the Queen Elizabeth, Mr. Chaplin said "I applied for a re-entry permit which I was given in good faith, and which I accepted in good faith. Therefore I assume that the U.S. Government will recognize its validity." Under the law, grounds for denying admission to an alien include "moral turpitude" and "political affiliations."

Stevenson Stands By Civil Rights

RICHMOND, Virginia, Sunday (Reuter). — The Democratic Presidential candidate, Governor Adlai Stevenson, told an audience in this southern town that he stood by the Democratic platform calling for Federal legislation on civil rights for Negroes. This is the first time Governor Stevenson has pronounced his views before a Southern audience on a subject which split the Democratic party in 1948, against a background of opposition to his candidacy by some prominent Southern Democratic leaders.

TWO broad aspects of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem have been combined since the foundation in 1925: the secular and the spiritual. The first aims at the establishment of a University which will give Israel the men of science, the doctors, the lawyers, the agronomists and the administrators who are required. The second aims at the intellectual and spiritual centre of the Jewish people, where knowledge is Hebrewized not only in language but in thought. The former conception stresses the natural and physical sciences and the faculties that fit the student for a profession; the latter stresses the Institutes of Jewish and Oriental Studies and the broad humanities. The work of the University is typical in this respect of the development of the University as a whole.

In Britain, the Friends of the University made three major efforts, each for one of the new Faculties created since 1949. Agriculture, Law and Medicine. The biggest was on behalf of the extension of the School of Agriculture at Rehovot — now a Faculty — so as to enable the University authorities to admit each year double the number of students. The need for the enlargement of the teaching of the basic sciences in order to increase the supply of scientifically trained agronomists is overwhelming. To double the basic production of food is a primary aim of Israel. The English Friends under the Chairmanship of Prof. Norman Bentwich have been instrumental in securing a generous contribution for the building from the Jewish Colonization Association, and they have secured another generous contribution from the Humanitarian Trust, for the equipment of the laboratories and the enlarged school.

The second Faculty for which the Friends organized a special appeal was Law. The legal group has had the purpose of endowing a visiting Lectureship in English — or Anglo-Saxon — Law to be held from time to time by a distinguished teacher from the English-speaking countries. The occasion of the appointment of the President of the group, Lord Cohen, to be a Lord of Appeal, which is the highest judicial rank in the British Commonwealth, was taken advantage of to combine with the execution of that purpose, the honouring of his name in our University. The Lord Cohen Lectureship in English Law is now established, just as two years ago the Friends established the Chair of Political Science.

The Medical School, the third of the new Faculties, has from the outset been a special care of a Medical Group in England. Compared with the very special effort of the American Hadassah, the help from England had not been impressive, but valuable academic service is rendered by the English Friends through the grant to the society by the Humanitarian Trust of Research Fellowships for the younger teachers of Medicine and Science at the University. Half a dozen spend one or two years in research at English Universities, and then return better fitted to teach in Jerusalem.

But it is the contribution of Jerusalem to Jewish and Oriental studies, and to philosophy, history, classical learning and the social sciences, which are all included in the Humanities Faculty, — and to our knowledge of the history, sociology, geology, etc., of the Bible Lands, which make the University of Jerusalem the pride and responsibility of the Jewish communities over the world. Apart from the remittance of money, which is a small fraction of the budget, the English Friends do two things. They collect books and periodicals, and in this have the special help of the British Council. And they have been able to get Research Studentships for one or two younger teachers. One of these, Doctor Talmon, has brought to the University as well as to himself great renown by the publication in England of his study on The Origins of Totalitarian Democracy. In a different field of learning, Doctor Fuka, after a year at Oxford, has completed a study in Greek Political History, which is also to be published in England. Nowhere has the work of Professor Schoff, in the Department of Archaeology, which has culminated in his interpretation of the Dead Sea scrolls, evoked greater interest and controversy among scholars than in England.

NEED FOR RADICAL CHANGE OF POLICY Reparations Not Real Relief

By ELIEZER LIVNEN, M.K.

Israel's economy has reached the stage where a radical change in policy is vital. The salient features of this new course must be a rapid increase in output; the bringing of consumption into line with production; reduction of the disparity between imports and exports; the transfer of large numbers of workers from public works and non-productive undertakings to agriculture; the overall balancing of national and municipal budgets; retrenchment in Government and public services; the liquidation of unproductive enterprises which are supported by fixed prices and cheap foreign currency; rationalization of inflated production costs. In brief, a transition from an economy more and more dependent upon external philanthropy to one that is self-sustaining.

Such a change in policy involves considerable hardship for all sections of the population: a temporary decline in the standard of living and public services, far-reaching changes in habits of production, in the credit market, in the management of various undertakings, and in Trade Union practice. It is hardly surprising that so many people evince such an eagerness to clutch at straws professing that "the position is not as grave as it is made out to be," that, accordingly, there is no need for fundamental reforms and that we can continue along our conventional rut. The recently concluded German Reparations Agreement can, indeed, exert such a palliative influence. Such a delusion must therefore be assayed in good time.

Reparations Supplies
 We shall not discuss the details of the Reparations Agreement as formulated in the various clauses of that document and in the degree in which they will be implemented (which is something entirely different). Suffice it to remark, however, that after March 1954 the dimensions and terms of these reparations payments are not sufficiently assured. It is also uncertain to what extent the supply of goods on the dates provided for will be actually observed. At the present moment, we must give priority consideration to the question: Are these reparations liable to alleviate our economic situation in 1957 and 1958 as compared with 1952? Do these reparations in any way justify a postponement of the implementation of the internal national recovery programme, which has been under discussion for some time?

The only reply is a categorical negative. German reparations, even in the event of their being paid regularly, cannot increase our external income, compared with the tense levels of 1952. On the contrary, the foreign currency revenue of the Treasury may be lower than in the present year, despite the fact that the population of the country in 1953 as compared with 1952, the foreign currency revenue of the Treasury may be smaller; despite the expansion of Israel's productive potential, supplies of raw materials will be less assured. This does not denigrate in any way from the importance of German reparations. Quite the contrary. Without the reparations our straits would be desperate indeed. The reparations act as a certain buffer, lessening the impact of our difficult plight, but they do not provide any real relief.

MUSICAL DIARY

Not Yisrael's first Tuesday night concert after the summer holidays was under the baton of 25-years old Charles Schiff (conductor of the N.Y. Manhattan Chamber Orchestra and of the Lewishia Stadium Symphony Orchestra). He made a vivid opening with Mendelssohn's overture "Fingal's Cave." Edith Karnit, soloist with Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 2, gave a colourful and impersonal reading. Ernest Bloch's "Concerto Grosso" is one of his most enjoyable works, the gifted guest-conductor gave a dynamic performance and knew how to build a climax. Avner Aharon's reading of the piano obligato-part was well done. Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (English horn solo: Jaanov Mones; Trumpet solo: Y. Brumma) maintained the highly favourable impression of the premiere some months ago. Morton Gould's "Favane" (from American Sinfonietta No. 2), a sparkling jazz-like piece, received a gay interpretation. The rich programme closed with Bartok's popular "Rumanian Folk Dances."

year, despite these reparations. Citizens of this country must appreciate this starkly plain fact, in all its gravity.

Larger Grants
 The American Grant-in-Aid for the year 1953-54 is somewhat larger than its predecessor, but it will be expended far more rapidly. The balance that will remain outstanding in 1955 will be much smaller than the balance of the previous grant-in-aid that remained in 1952. The income derived by the Ministry of Finance from the United Israel Appeal and the Independence Bond Drive will be less in 1955 than in the current year, by at least thirty per cent, not only because of the decline in contributions and the sale of bonds, which is already regarded as certain, but because of the various advances and loans received on account of this income. We may presume that the Ministry will not be able — nor desire — to continue this policy.

We must evaluate the situation without any illusions, in its full gravity. Despite the larger population of the country in 1953 as compared with 1952, the foreign currency revenue of the Treasury may be smaller; despite the expansion of Israel's productive potential, supplies of raw materials will be less assured. This does not denigrate in any way from the importance of German reparations. Quite the contrary. Without the reparations our straits would be desperate indeed. The reparations act as a certain buffer, lessening the impact of our difficult plight, but they do not provide any real relief.

Reparations Supplies
 We shall not discuss the details of the Reparations Agreement as formulated in the various clauses of that document and in the degree in which they will be implemented (which is something entirely different). Suffice it to remark, however, that after March 1954 the dimensions and terms of these reparations payments are not sufficiently assured. It is also uncertain to what extent the supply of goods on the dates provided for will be actually observed. At the present moment, we must give priority consideration to the question: Are these reparations liable to alleviate our economic situation in 1957 and 1958 as compared with 1952? Do these reparations in any way justify a postponement of the implementation of the internal national recovery programme, which has been under discussion for some time?

The only reply is a categorical negative. German reparations, even in the event of their being paid regularly, cannot increase our external income, compared with the tense levels of 1952. On the contrary, the foreign currency revenue of the Treasury may be lower than in the present year, despite the fact that the population of the country in 1953 as compared with 1952, the foreign currency revenue of the Treasury may be smaller; despite the expansion of Israel's productive potential, supplies of raw materials will be less assured. This does not denigrate in any way from the importance of German reparations. Quite the contrary. Without the reparations our straits would be desperate indeed. The reparations act as a certain buffer, lessening the impact of our difficult plight, but they do not provide any real relief.

Visa Troubles Hit U. S. Sheepmen

By RICHARD MOWBRAY

ANYONE who has run into an American visa trouble under the McCarran Immigration law may derive grim satisfaction from the fact that visa trouble in reverse is hindering emigration to the United States of alien sheepmen. Senator Pat McCarran is anxious to let in on April 1, 1953, President Truman signed a bill sponsored by the Nevada Senator which was passed as an emergency measure to provide relief for the sheep-raising industry by facilitating the admission of 600 skilled alien sheep-herders and to increase the United States wool production which dropped from 485 million pounds in 1942 to 280 million pounds in 1951. The decline in wool production is attributed to the very serious shortage of sheep-herders in America.

Urgent Cases
 Franklin showed this correspondent a couple of cables he had received from worried sheepmen in California. One of them read:
 "And sheepmen with inquiries regarding sheep-herders every body about of help stop lambing time. Might we not have stop this in getting serious."
 Another:
 "It possible send me two herds out of France stop all growers here alarmed stop this order is prevent I need them right now."
